

Sabrina Krümpelmann holds an M.A. in history, sociology and cultural studies from universities of Berlin, Cape Town and Mannheim with a focus on colonial history and gender studies. She has been self-employed for many years in the field of event- and cultural-management and as a freelancer in international foundations as well as the education system, mainly in Southern Africa. With a wide experience in primary school education, in the editorial department of a science publishing house, in public relations as well as in project management, she has been working with the Agency for Historical, Civic, and Media Education e.V. since September 2017.